Travel Tips

- When visiting the waterfalls, please remember to follow the signs along the trail or roadway and do not venture off marked paths.
- Leave only footprints and take only photographs when you leave.
   Please do not litter or damage the natural setting of the waterfalls.
- Be sure to wear appropriate footwear as most of the falls require walking for viewing and most have access to hiking trails.
- Be alert to dangers along the trails such as poisonous plants, wildlife and cliff edges.
- Please adhere to all posted 'permitted activities' signs at each waterfall (swimming/ climbing are not permitted)

Touring Notes

- The full duration of the waterfall tour is 250 km (Holstein Dam to Indian Falls) and is best enjoyed over two days.
- Most of the waterfalls have interpretive signage onsite and directional signage on the roadways to assist and complete your experience.
- · We recommend visiting in spring for increased water flow.
- · To capture the best photo of a waterfall, choose an overcast day.

This charming five metre waterfall is located in historic downtown Holstein, just beyond the gates of Jubilee Park, on the east side of Grey County Road 109. The waterfall is the result of the flow from the Mill Pond on Norman Reeves Creek over the Holstein dam. As you enter the park, you'll find a viewing area for the waterfall, the dam and the mill pond. The best view of the waterfalls is from just downstream at the entrance to the park.

Pack a picnic and relax with the sound of rushing water nearby. You can also get a unique view of the waterfall from the old railway bridge that runs on top of the dam. Hike up to the railway bridge for great views of the falls and the mill pond. In 1881, the railroad bed into Holstein had been completed, crossing the creek and creating a dam that provided an inexpensive source of power for the feed mill. The mill owner, W.T. Petrie, donated the land and water east of the railroad to develop this natural park area in the heart of Holstein. After photographing the waterfall, hike up and enjoy the park's picnic area, pavilion, ball diamond, playground equipment and walking trails.

The Webwood Falls Nature Reserve is located north of the Town of Kimberley in the municipality of Grey Highlands. The property was donated by Mr. James Horwood, a longtime supporter of the Bruce Trail Conservancy. The falls were named in memory of his parents, Edith Webster and Eric Horwood. It now stands in permanent protection as part of the Bruce Trail Conservation Corridor.

Two small streams converge on the property creating this spectacular waterfall. The stream continues through a deep, forested river valley that cuts through the southern portion of the property. A diversity of habitats, including regenerating fields, mature Sugar Maple forest and meadow marsh support 261 documented species, including 219 plant species and 42 faunal species. Several species at risk and provincially and/or federally endangered species are found on Webwood Falls Nature Reserve. A side loop of the Bruce Trail traverses through the property offering moderate hiking. Portions of the trail pass through original perennial gardens from the Horwood farmstead.

Note: Future construction will provide a viewing platform on the south side of the falls.

Welcome to Grey County's Waterfalls

Feel the rush as the sparkling rivers of Grey County tumble over the edges of the Niagara Escarpment. Our tour covers 10 waterfalls, winding from Holstein through the Beaver Valley up to Owen Sound.

The entire waterfall tour covers 250 km. You can complete a driving tour in one day, but why rush it? Take two or three days and really enjoy each site; do some exploring and check out some of the must-see attractions along the way. Take in small town hospitality by staying at one of the local accommodations near the waterfalls on the tour. While you're here, be sure to sample some regional cuisine at one of the many restaurants that make local and fresh foods their specialty.

Grey County's waterfalls are every bit as beautiful in the winter season. Pull on your boots or strap on some snowshoes and hike to a frozen cascade. Bring your camera and a flask of hot chocolate for a perfect afternoon outing, or plan your route and spend a weekend visiting all seven waterfalls.

We've created a handy downloadable PDF with maps and detailed descriptions of all winter-safe waterfalls to hike. It also suggests where to rent snowshoes close to the falls. Download your copy at www.visitgrey. ca/winter-waterfalls and plan your winter waterfalls getaway. Please note that some of the waterfalls are harder to access during the winter months than others. Some parking lots may not be plowed, especially immediately after a heavy snowfall.

When visiting waterfalls in winter, remember to:

- Follow the signs along trails and roadways and do not venture off marked naths
- Be alert to dangers along the trails such as falling ice, snow or cliff edges.
- Wear appropriate footwear and clothing to suit the weather, snowshoes may be helpful for longer hikes.
- Hike in pairs or small groups; ensure that someone knows where you are and what time you are expected back.
- Make sure that you are carrying a cell phone or two-way radio.

Indian Falls is the most remote waterfall on the Grey County tour. The walk to the falls requires following the banks of Indian River and making a fairly steep ascent up the side of the gorge. It is rough underfoot, but there are stairs that make the climb up the gorge manageable. The view of the falls is more likely to make you breathless than the 10-15 minute hike!

Indian Falls is horseshoe-shaped with 'bridal veil' falling water similar to Niagara Falls, although on a much smaller scale. The classic plunge waterfall drops 15 metres into an amphitheatre - shaped gorge.

In the summer months, the falls can dry up to a mere trickle, but Indian Falls is still worth a visit as it is an opportunity to see the interesting composition of the rock formation. Indian Falls was formed when the soft red Queenston Formation shale layers eroded exposing the Manitoulin dolomite cap rock. There are signs of ongoing geological changes as the falling water gradually undercuts the harder rock creating a deep hole in the bedrock at the bottom. The trail leads upstream to a beautiful meadow where the peace is only interrupted by the rhythmic drumming of the falls.

As you drive up the hill from downtown Owen Sound heading west towards Southampton or north to Wiarton it's easy to miss Jones Falls in the hamlet of Springmount. It's well worth swinging into the parking lot just north of the intersection of Highway 6 and 21 to have a look. Here in the Pottawatomi Conservation Area, a one-kilometre trail leads to Jones Falls where the Pottawatomi River cascades 12 metres over the Niagara Escarpment. This spot has been a favourite with locals and photographers for decades and many of the early postcards from the Owen Sound area featured stunning scenic shots of Jones Falls.

The walk along the trail to the waterfall is easy underfoot and leads through a beautiful old-growth forest. Cross the arched bridge to the south side of the falls to get the best view. Here among the giant boulders you can look back and get spectacular views of the falls. The falls can also be viewed by following the Bruce Trail along the other side of the river.

Although named after Samuel Jones, who built a sawmill on the river in 1849, the history of the falls goes back to Charles Rankin who surveyed the falls in 1833 after being appointed Deputy Provincial Surveyor of Upper Canada.

Walter's Falls is a spectacular double plunge waterfall where a tributary of the Big Head River drops 14 metres into the gorge below. John Walter discovered the falls in 1852 and the village, the creek and the falls all bear a version of his name.

Walter's Falls has become a tourist destination since the opening of the Falls Inn in 2005. The Inn has earned a place in Ontario's Finest Inns directory and has become a hot destination for weddings.

There is a viewing platform built out above the falls that gives an excellent up close look at the falls. A bridge crosses the falls giving easy access to the far side riverbank to get a different perspective of the twin falls. Of special interest to the mechanically-inclined is the Walter's Falls Milling Company, one of the last remaining mills in Ontario to use water to power its turbines.

The Walter's Falls Creek Side trail is a loop of the Bruce Trail which can be hiked in either direction from the Inn, and is a 2-4 hour hike depending on the route taken. Pick up a map at the front desk and after your hike, treat yourself to a delicious meal at the Inn.

A five-minute walk along a path shaded by a heavy tree canopy brings visitors to the dramatic view of Eugenia Falls plunging 30 metres into the Cuckoo Valley gorge below. On a sunny day, the light dances on the falling water, prompting the First Nations people to name it 'Sparkling Waters'.

This is an area rich in history. The falls once supported five mills and was the site of Ontario's second hydro-electric plant. There was even a shortlived gold rush and although the 'gold' turned out to be iron pyrite-fool's gold, the falls themselves are a treasure well worth a visit.

As much of the water from the Beaver River is diverted by the hydroelectric power station, the result is visitors are treated to a spectacular view of a tall and narrow waterfall that disappears into the forested gorge. It's suggested that you stay behind the stone wall safely from the edge of the vertical cliffs. It is possible to follow a path to the bottom of the falls, but this route is only suitable for experienced hikers. Less demanding is a section of the Bruce Trail that leads down to Hoggs Falls. The round trip to Hoggs Falls is about 3 hours and includes a steep climb on the way back.

The roar of cascading water can be heard long before Hoggs Falls comes into view, as it is initially hidden from visitors by the vibrant foliage of cedar trees and ferns.

Hoggs Falls, long considered one of Grey County's best-kept secrets, doesn't disappoint. Although the falls itself is only seven metres high, the volume of water from the Boyne River and the backdrop of lush greenery create a breathtaking scene that is picture-postcard perfect.

Although Hoggs Falls is located a mere five-minute walk from the parking lot, it's an undeveloped site that gives visitors the opportunity to view a spectacular waterfall close up in a natural setting. It is possible to reach the river and view the falls from below, but the path is slippery and often wet so extreme caution must be taken.

Hoggs Falls is named for William Hogg, of the illustrious Hogg family of York (after whom Toronto's Hoggs Hollow is named), who settled in Eugenia in the 1870s.

As you head up the hill out of the scenic Grey County town of Durham and travel along a residential street, you might not expect to find a waterfall, but the scenery soon opens up and there among the cedars you find McGowan Falls at the Durham Conservation Area.

With just a three-metre drop, McGowan Falls is not as dramatic as some of the other Grev County Falls, but its location on a picturesque stretch of the Saugeen River makes McGowan Falls well worth a visit. There is a bridge across the crest of the falls and this is the ideal place to view the Saugeen River winding its way through the wooded countryside.

The conservation area boasts 60 hectares including three kilometres of river frontage making it a popular spot for sport anglers of all ages who fish the river for salmon and trout. There is also a beautiful partially shaded swimming beach that is the perfect place for a cool dip on a hot summer's day. The adventurous visitor may want to enjoy a 'whirlpool' in the natural limestone pools below the falls. The falls on Weavers Creek in Owen Sound's Harrison Park provide the opportunity to see a miniature plunge falls flanked by cascading falls – two waterfalls in one.

The trek begins in the city's 40-hectare park where Weavers Creek feeds water that flows through the bird sanctuary before joining the Sydenham River. Following the creek upstream as it winds through the campground where it is spanned by wooden bridges, you eventually reach the park's swimming pool and it is here off to the far right (west) corner you find the boardwalk that leads you back to the falls.

The boardwalk allows visitors to enjoy a wilderness area right within the city limits as it passes through an unspoiled mini gorge under a canopy of old growth forest. To the left of the boardwalk, the creek tumbles over the riverbed creating a symphony of falling water.

The walk along the 300-metre boardwalk is easy footing and it takes less than three minutes to reach a view of the Weavers Creek Falls. Note: the boardwalk leading to the falls is in Harrison Park, but Weavers Creek Falls itself is on private property. Please be respectful when visiting.
